THREE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING.

BY R. S. PALFREY.

What do the robins whisper about
  From their homes in the elms and birches?
I've tried to study the riddle out,
But still in my mind is many a doubt,
  In spite of deep researches.

While all of the world is in silence deep,
  In the twilight of early dawning
They begin to chirp and twitter and peep,
As if they were talking in their sleep,
  At three o'clock in the morning.

Perhaps the little ones stir, and complain
  That it's time to be up and doing;
And the mother-bird sings a drowsy strain
To coax them back to their dreams again,
  Though distant cocks are crowing.

Or do they tell secrets that sho'd not be heard
  By mortals listening and prying?
Perhaps we might learn from some whispered word
The best way to bring up a little bird,—
  Or the wonderful art of flying.

It may be they speak of one autumn day
  When with many a feathered roamer,
Under the clouds so cold and gray,
Over the hills they took their way,
  In search of the vanished summer.

It may be they gossip from nest to nest,
  Hidden and leaf-enfolded;
For do we not often hear it confessed,
When a long-kept secret at last is guessed,
  That "a little bird has told it?"

Perhaps—but the question is wrapped in doubt;
  They give me no hint or warning.
Listen, and tell me, if you find out,
What do the robins whisper about
  At three o'clock in the morning.

THE BEGINNING AND THE END.

Mississippi, with its flat lands, sluggish streams, great shallow lakes and bayous, is not in its scenery suggestive of romance or poetry. A few rugged bluffs exhibit its upland—it has no cloud-capped mountains, no running cataracts, no shadowy glens.

But it has dark-eyed sylphs, formed for love, and love alone; men, too, whose veins run wild with blood as hot as the lava's flood which overruns the red volcano's crest.

In 1848 a young man stood on the piazza of his father's almost princely mansion near Natchez, engaged in an earnest discussion with that father—the wealthiest planter in the country. The young man was in shape and feature very handsome; but when excited his dark eyes and frowning brow spoke too plainly that he had a nature which would brook no control.

"Tom," said the old planter, and he spoke in a low, resolute tone; "Tom, this marriage must not, and shall not come off. You are my only son—if you do as I wish, all my property will soon be yours, and until it is you shall have all the money you can use to purchase life's enjoyments. Excepting the one thing, I have never denied you anything. I say again you must not think of marrying that girl!"

"Father, you speak plainly and positively. Go on a little farther and tell me why I must not marry Mary Prescott."

And the young man spoke quite as low as his father, while his face wore a look of self-determination.

"First, then, because I say it shall not be!"

"Well, father, go on, I wait for your secondly."

"Secondly, she is as poor as a church mouse, and has only blood to be proud of."

"Well, sir, have you a thirdly? If so, let me hear that before I give you not only a first but a final answer."

"Yes—thirdly, years ago, her father crossed my path—we quarrelled, he got the better of me, and I swore I never would forgive him, and I never will! His blood shall never mingle in friendship with mine."

"Is that your lastly, father?"

"Yes, Tom, it is—and now obey my wishes, and there is no wish, but that one on earth that I can accede to which will not be granted you."

"Thank you, sir, for your liberality in that respect, but that one wish is the only thing on earth that I happen to desire. Where a man truly loves, he has but one thought, one hope, one desire."

"A man—you are but a boy yet!"

"Father, at my age you married!"

"Yes, and pleased my father, while I doubled the estate you will own if you obey me."

"Then I shall never own it. I am engaged to marry Mary Prescott, and I will keep the engagement."

"I doubt it, Mr. Tom Williams—I doubt it. In the first place, my sister will never be allowed by her family to beg a place in a rich man's family; in the next my father hates yours too much to ever forget the past or to see his blood mingle with yours."

It was a young man, rather coarsely dressed, but fine looking in person who spoke.

Tom Williams in an instant recognized the brother of the girl whom he loved so well,

"I will not debate the question with you. Mary and myself will do as we please," he said bitterly as he turned to enter the house.

"Try to see her again, and see who will stand in your path," cried young Prescott, and he turned the horse upon which he had ridden up, and galloped away.

"Now I hope, sir, you are satisfied. To be rebuffed and scorned by her family ought to be enough to rouse your pride at least!"

"It is, sir. It makes me proud to feel that I have enough strength of mind and enough courage, too, to marry the girl I love in spite of all opposition. I didn't intend to hurry up the matter quite so fast, but now I will make Mary Prescott my wife before to-morrow's sun goes down, or the devil will have a mortgage on my soul!"

These last words were uttered as the young man passed in, and the father was left alone on the piazza.

"He will not dare to persist in this disobedience," soliloquized the old man.—"The thought of disinheritance will check him in time."

* * * * * * *

Another day—a lovely day and a lovely scene: A cottage under the broad spreading limbs of a live oak—a cottage almost covered with red honey suckles and white climbing roses. And standing in the doorway of this cottage was a tall, slender girl, with eyes of that soft dreamy hazel, which at times seem black; hair hanging in jetty curls over her shoulders as graceful as a sculptor could ask for a model.

This was Mary Prescott, and holding a note from Thomas Williams against her throbbing breast, while her eyes looked anxiously down a lime tree avenue, she murmured:

"Will he come—oh! WILL he come?"

"He had better NOT," said a voice close to her ear.

It was her brother who spoke.

"Oh, Jesse—you surely would not interfere with our love," she said beseechingly.

"I have already interfered. Mary, his cursed old father said you were a beggar, and I told him and his son you would not beg your way into their family. And more than that, I told Tom Williams not to come here or he would find something in his way."

"Oh, Jesse—how could you?—but see he is coming. Now, dear brother, do go away. I want to see Tom, and see him alone."

"You shall not, Mary. That's as good as sworn to!"

He made no farther reply, but sternly watched Thomas Williams, as the young man hurried forward to meet her who was all in all to him.

"Stop where you are!" cried Jesse Prescott, when Williams was within ten or twelve paces. "I told you if you came here you would find some one in your way."

And he drew a Derringer pistol, cocked and raised it.

"There is but one will on earth for me to obey," said Williams, still moving forward.

"Then I'll be the will to stop you!" cried young Prescott, sighting the barrel, which now laid level with the heart of Williams.

"Brother—brother!" screamed Mary Prescott as she sprang directly in front of him.

A report—a low scream—a grasping moan and Mary Prescott's love and life were iced in death.

Thomas Williams for an instant stood as if he had been struck with a sudden paralysis. Then with a howl of agony, he sprang forward and buried a knife up to the hilt in the heart of Jesse Prescott.

From that hour he was never seen by father or friends in Mississippi. But first in Texas, then in Mexico, and at last in '49 and '50, in California, a strangely desperate man, who called himself Tom Williams, made himself dreaded and feared by his wreckless ferocity—almost inhuman thirst for blood—a carelessness of peril which amounted to utter madness

Every where this man's track was marked with blood. A dead shot; he avoided no quarrels, but continually sought them, and he never failed to hit his victim when his hand was raised.

Men feared and avoided him, until with a sneer, he made it a common remark that all the brave men were dead, or, to use his own phrase, "wiped out."

One night after two or three years of wild life, he entered a mining camp on or near the Yuba, known then as Natches. He was, as usual, morose and ugly, ready to quarrel with any and every one, and fixing his eyes on a young man named Jack Moore, he used a grossly insulting epithet. The young man turned pale, deathly pale, but it was not the pallor of cowardice.

"Tom Williams," said he, "I seek no quarrel. I do not wish to be what you are, a blood stained murderer, but unsay those words or you'll repent having spoken them."

"Bah! you're a coward like the rest," cried Williams.

The next instant, his face covered with blood, he fell to the floor. Moore had taken up a two pound weight and had hurled it with unerring aim at Williams' head.

"Leave, Jack, leave!" cried the inmates of the store. "He'll kill you when he comes to!"

"I will not leave; I did not seek the quarrel; I will not fly from it for him," said Moore, as his antagonist rose to his feet.

"I take back one thing—you are not a coward!" cried Williams, as he dashed the blinding blood from his eyes. "But look here, Jack Moore, heel yourself! (a California phrase—arm yourself)—The world isn't big enough for both of us. Either you or I go under in the morning. Look out for me then!"

"All right," said young Moore, quietly, as the dreaded desperado staggered away.

In vain Jack Moore's friends tried to persuade him to avoid an encounter which they believed would be fatal to him.—Every effort was made to get him to leave. He would not go. But, arming himself when the next day's sun rose, he went to the same store where the difficulty had occurred the night before.

A few minutes later, Tom Williams, ready for the fray, entered the door. Every one but a kind-hearted old man rushed out of the way. He, reckless of his own peril, stayed to try to keep the men apart.

"Are you ready to die, Jack?" cried Williams, as he deliberately drew his weapon.

"No, but I am ready to put an end to your killing folks!" replied Moore, as he drew his.

The old man rushed up to Moore and threw his arms around him just as Williams fired the first shot. With a groan of horror he sprang back, for the hot blood spurted out over his face from a wound received by Moore. Williams had shot the latter through the neck.

But the young man did not fall—shot after shot passed between the combatants until suddenly Williams dropped his pistol hand.

"I've got it, Jack!" he cried. "you have killed the best and the worst man in all California. Mary, I'm coming at last."

These were the last words of Thomas Williams, the desperado—Moore had shot him through the heart. Though fearfully wounded himself, the young man recovered, and is now mining in Yuba county, where this incident will be well remembered.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.—Don't expect too much of them; it has taken forty years, it may be, to make you what you are with all your lessons of experience; and most probably you are a faulty being at best. Above all don't expect judgment in a child, or patience under trials. Sympathise with them in their mistakes or troubles; don't ridicule them. Remember not to measure a child's trials by your standard. "As one whom his mother comforteth," says the inspired writer, and beautifully does he convey to us the deep, faithful love that ought to be found in every woman's heart, the unfailing sympathy in all the chidren's griefs. Let the memories of their childhood be as bright as you can make them. Grant them every innocent pleasure in your power. We have often felt our temper rise to see how their pains were thwarted by older persons, when a little trouble on their part would have given the child pleasure, the memory of which would last a lifetime. Lastly, don't think a child hopeless because it betrays some very bad habits. We have known children that seemed to have been born thieves and liars, so early did they display these undeniable traits; yet these same children have become noble men and women, and ornaments to society. But they had wise, affectionate parents, and whatever else you may be compelled to deny your child by your circumstances in life, give it what it most values, plenty of loving kindness.

STEEPLE JACKS.—"Steeple Jacks" are workmen who, by an ingenious device, ascend to the side or top of a high chimney or steeple, without building staging from the ground or roof. The London Builder narrates, that some of the factory chimneys at New Swindon, having got out of repairs, the company resolved to employ a "Steeple Jack," who accordingly made his appearance at New Swindon and set to work. His plan of proceeding was to fly an Indian kite with two strings attached. The kite raises in a perpendicular direction, and when above the chimney top, is guided over it. The second string is then pulled, and thus a complete communication is formed over the chimney. By means of the string a double copper wire is drawn up, and by the wires some pulleys and tackling. "Steeple Jack" then ascends, hand over hand, and places an iron band around the chimney, which he secures tightly. Planks are then drawn up, and laid upon irons projecting from the band; and thus, in a very short time, a scaffold sufficient for his purpose is erected, at a cost very much less than that of a regular builder's.—"Jack" had two or three assistants, and managed, in his ærial manner, to pull down one of the factory chimneys, which had become so badly out of repair as to require rebuilding. This scaffolding looks, at a distance, like a large India rubber band around the chimney, with ropes depending from it.

CAN a woman be wetter than when she has a cataract in her eye, a waterfall on the back of her head, a creek in her back, forty springs in her hooped skirt, and high tied shoes on? Yes, when she has a notion (an ocean) in her head.

MARRIAGE CEREMONIES.

We glean from Woods' "Wedding Day in all Ages" a few of the more remarkable customs connected with marriage and the marriage ceremony:

The ancient Scythians, being a warlike people, would not ma ry a maiden who had not killed an enemy.

Among the Nestorians, on the wedding night the bride groom gave the bride a kick, and commanded her to pull off his shoes as a token of her submission to him.

In Chaldea, on the wedding day, the priest came into the bridegroom's house and lighted a fire, which he thought ought never to be put out until the hour of the death of one of the pair. If, during the life of either the husband or wife, the fire went out, it was considered a sign that marriage between them was dead also

Among the ancient Assyrians, all the marriageable young ladies were assembled in one place, and the public crier put them up to sell one after another.

The Babylonians, also, had a kind of a market for their daughters at certain times every year. Assembled in public places, where they were exposed to general view, they were disposed of to the best bidders.

In modern Egypt, a woman can never be seen by her husband until after she has been married.

Negotiations are usually conducted by professional women, who see the offered bride and report to the masculine candidate. A similar custom prevails in West Barbary, where the bridegroom does not see his bride until he is introduced to her in the bridal chamber, but a woman, on his behalf, watches her in her bath and reports as to her charms and defects.

In the Mulluca Islands the same custom prevails.

Among the Medes, a man was not entitled to a full degree of respect unless he had seven wives, nor a woman unless she had five husbands. So says Strabo.

The nobility might have as many wives as they pleased, but all over seven could be parted with at discretion.

A Persian's mode of making love, was to burn himself in some visible part, in order to prove his faithfulness to his mistress, who, if she accepts him, gives a silken scarf to bind up his wounds.

An odd marriage ceremony among the Persians was for the parties to meet at moonlight on a bed in the presence of two sponsors, who had rice in their hands—The sponsor for the man, touching the woman's forehead, asked her if we shoul l have the man, and the sponsor for the woman performed the same ceremony to the man.

The hands of the parties were then joined and rice scattered over them.—Among the Vezerees, in Persia, when a woman is smitten with a man, she sends the drummer of the camp to fasten a handkerchief to his cap, with a pin she has used to bind up her hair.

This is done by strategem in public, and the victim is obliged to accept the woman provided he can pay her price to her father.

Among the Carcassians, the bride was conducted to the groom's house attended by relatives and by musicians. On entering the house the bride kicked over a pitcher of wine that was placed in the middle of the apartment, and scattered the paste in a vessel of bread dough, at its side, against the walls.

At a marriage in Benares, in the East Indies, the man and woman go into a stream of water together, a priest being present. The official performs the ceremony by pouring water on a cow, and tying the couple together by their clothes. Then a walk around the cow and a few other forms complete the union.

With a tribe in Neilgherry it was the custom for the maids and bachelors who wished to get married, to erect a hut inside an enclosed space of ground, with a thick space around, so that the women within the enclosure and the men without could not see each other. The females then went into the hut, and the males thrust sticks through the fence. Simultaneously the former came out of the house and each one caught hold of a stick, the owner of which became her husband.

At Ambonia, in the last century, the marriage ceremony consisted principally in throwing backward and forward an egg into the wide sleeves of the bride and bridegroom's outer garments. In seven days after the wedding the couple were obliged to sit together, looking solemnly upon the ground.

A MAN without ears, lives in Iowa, and farms for a living in Hardin county.—The Sentinel has the following description of him: "We saw a man the other day who lives temporarily a few miles from town, who was born without ears, but who in all other respects was perfect in form. Where ears should be there were slight protuberances of cartilage, no opening for the admission of sound. We have often met and conversed with him, and never before knew of the existence of this singular freak. The gentleman says that sound reaches the inward sense of hearing through his skull, in the region of the temples. Ordinary social intercourse can be carried on with him, exciting no farther suspicion than that he is a little hard of hearing."

THE YALLER DOG.

BY MARK TWAIN.

When Noah disembarked at Ararat he had scarcely touched the pier when he proceeded to tally his passengers. He had just checked his last item in the list—a Mr. and Mrs. Bedbug—when the cringing figure of a quadruped came swinging down the gang-plank with his tail between his legs. "Drat it, if there ain't that yaller dog!" says Noah, aiming a vicious kick at the brute. But, with a facility born of long and bitter experience, the brute dodged the projectile, ejaculating "kiyi," which is Syriac for "declined with thanks," or "not for Jo"—he disappeared, while Noah, who had his sea-legs on, was unable to recover his balance, and sat down with emphasis on the back of his head.

Noah arose, and, in accordance with the style prevalent among the patriarchs, he proceeded to soothe his affronted dignity by pronouncing a variegated anathema upon the yaller dog, which had characteristically sneaked unobserved on board, in the confusion of putting to sea, and capsized the Captain at the first port.—He cursed that dog in body, limb, bark, hide, hair, tail and wag, and all his generations, relations and kindred, by consanguinity or affinity, and his heirs and assigns. He cursed him with endless hunger, with perpetual fear, with parennial laziness, with hopeless mange, with incessant fleas, and with his tail between his legs. He closed his maledictions by a sparkling display of pyrotechnics, from the demoralizing effects of which the yaller dog has never recovered.

With this curse sticking to him like a revenue stamp, the yaller dog can't help being "cussed." He don't try to help it. He follows Noah's programme with a sneaking fidelity. He is an Ishmaelite among dogs. He receives the most oppressive courtesies in the form of brickbats, boots and hot water, which make his life an animated target excursion. He boards around like a district school teacher, and it is meal-time with him twenty-four hours in the day. The rest of the time he hankers after something to eat. He is too omniverous for an epicure. Cram him at Delmonico's, and he would hunger for dessert from an Albany boarding-house.

He can't be utilized. He is too tired. As a swill-cart locomotive, a hunter, or a sentinel, he is an ignominious failure. The dog churn was a strategic attempt to employ his waste energies, but he had no waste energies, and butter had too much self-respect to "come at his pursuasion." So the dog churn was dropped.

No sausage maker dare foreclose his lien on the yaller dog, lest his customers—no longer "soothed and sustained by an unfaltering trust"—transfer their patronage to some less audacious dealer.—The savages, who admire baked dog, and can even attack tripe and explore the mysteries of hash, without dismay, acknowledged the yaller dog to be too much for their gastric intrepidity.

He always manages to belong to a ragged, tobacco-chewing, whiskey-drinking master, whose business is swapping dogs and evading the dog tax. The yaller dog is acquainted with himself, and he enjoys the intimacy with edifying contempt. He slinks along through life, on a diagonal dog trot, as if in doubt as to which end of him is entitled to the precedence. He is always pervaded by a hang-dog sense of guilt, and when retributive tinware is fastened to his tail, he "flies from the wrath to come" with a horrified celerity which ought to be very suggestive to two-legged sinners of a similar ordeal in store for him.

The yaller dog is—well to speak in italics, he is a slouch.

DUMB, BUT ELOQUENT.—The following touching story of "a handsome coach dog" and his drunken master is vouched for by a leading Boston paper, from which we quote:

"The man pursued his devious course, closely followed by his four-footed companion, till at length he approached the saloon referred to, and was about to enter, when, to the surprise af all who had witnessed the affair, the dog jumped up, and catching the skirts of the man's coat, sought to prevent him from going in.—The inebriated biped spoke in angry tones to the beast, but it was without avail, till a more than ordinary command induced him to relinquish his hold, and the man hastened inside, followed by his faithful companion and would-be protector.

"Actuated simply by curiosity, we also went in, and as we gained a position near the bar, saw in close proximity thereto the beast and his master, the latter trying to reach the bar, and the former standing on his hind legs with his fore-paws placed against the man's breast, vainly endeavoring, even at the eleventh hour, to prevent him from again indulging in the intoxicating cup.

"To the credit of the bar-tender, be it stated, that he refused to furnish the man with more liquor, and tears were drawn from eyes that had long been unused to the melting mood, as at each refusal the undoubtedly heart-stricken canine would bestow a look intended, doubtless, to be one of gratitude upon the dispenser of "juleps," "slings," and "tods," and then turning would as it were, mutely beseech his liquor loving master to abstain."

Cambria Freeman.

EBENSBURG, PA.

THURSDAY MORNING, : : JUNE 2, 1870.

To the Democratic Voters of Cambria County.

In pursuance of a resolution of the County Committee, adopted Dec. 6th, 1869, I request the Democratic voters of the county to meet at their respective places of holding elections on SATURDAY, JUNE 4TH, 1870, at 2 o'clock, P. M.,—the voters present at that hour to elect one person to act as Judge and two persons to act as Clerks of said election, and after the Board is organized they will receive the votes of all the qualified Democratic voters of the county upon one of three propositions submitted to the Democracy, to wit: Whether they will adopt the Crawford County System, the Increased Delegate System, or retain the present Delegate System. The polls shall be kept open until 6 o'clock, P. M., after which the returns of said election shall be signed by the Clerks and handed to the Judge of said election, who is appointed Return Judge. The Return Judges will meet at the Court House in Ebensburg, at 1 o'clock, P. M., on TUESDAY following, when and where the returns shall be read, and the proposition which shall have received the highest number of votes will thereupon be adopted for the government of the party. F. A. SHOEMAKER,
Chairman Co. Com.

A Bad Parallel.

THE Johnstown Tribune is anxious for an excuse to bespatter us. Some two years ago THOMAS A. MAGUIRE, a United States official at Washington, wrote from that city to M. M. ADAMS, Esq., of Cresson, a letter opening up the way to further correspondence, making it an object to him (ADAMS) to change his political faith and support Hon. DANIEL J. MORRELL for Congress.—Mr. ADAMS handed that letter and his reply to the then editor of the Freeman, by whom it was published. That was a matter entirely and exclusively between Messrs. MAGUIRE and ADAMS, and the publication of the former gentleman's letter and the latter gentleman's reply was nothing more than the publication in the Democrat and Tribune of Mr. PERSHING's letter and Mr. M'LAUGHLIN's rejoinder, for which act nodody ever blamed either of them. The Freeman had nothing to do with the character of Mr. MAGUIRE's letter when its owner requested its publication. The Tribune does not pretend that we opened the letter, nor that we even read it. Then where is the parallel! Mr. M'LAUGHLIN did open another man's private letter entrusted to his care. The whole difficulty arose out of that act, and the less Mr. M'LAUGHLIN or the Tribune stir it up the better for their own peace of mind and damaged reputations.

We desire no personal controversy with the Tribune, and therefore shall not retort the dirty words applied to us; but simply desire for the Tribune a better judgment and a better spirit than it has manifested in this attempted parallel, and for Mr. M'LAUGHLIN a more correct, sincere and courteous apologist.

The Present Congress.

If there ever was a Congress that has utterly and miserably failed to meet the pressing demands of the whole country, the present body is pre-eminently entitled to that unenviable notoriety. It has been in session six months, and proposes to bring its useless, and, in many glaring instances, corrupt labors to a close on the 15th of July. It has been essentially a Congress of huge legislative jobs, and as the Hon. S. S. Cox remarked a few days ago in a speech, the present administration in all its leading measures is emphatically a jobbing concern. In the House weeks and months have been wasted away in the gold panic investigation and in that other shameless proceeding, the corrupt sale of West Point cadetships, both of which ended in whitewashing reports. The Georgia bill and other vindictive measures in relation to other Southern States, have consumed at least two months of the session. The tariff bill has occupied weeks and weeks of the time of the House, only to meet with an inglorious death and to be ruthlessly slaughtered in the house of its own boasted and peculiar friends. The odious income tax, against which the whole country protests, but which Grant's Commissioner of Internal Revenue (Delano) stoutly defends, was not and will not be repealed. On the great and important subject of currency nothing has been done, or is likely to be done, during the present session, although there has been a vast amount of fine talk indulged in about funding the debt at a lower rate of interest. There has not been much difficulty, however, in passing bills by which millions of acres of the public domain have been granted to a set of corrupt and voracious rail road corporations. The most shameless and gigantic swindle of this description has been the unparalleled grant of the public lands to the Northern Pacific Rail Road. Outrageous and infamous as was this corrupt scheme, the Congressional vultures flocked to their prey, first in a degenerate Senate and last week in a still worse and more venal House, and achieved an easy victory in the passage of this bill of plunder and abomination. The bill, most villainous in its provisions, to enforce the fifteenth amendment, has been rushed through both Houses with indecent haste, and has been, or will be, signed by the President, during whose term of office the veto power has practically become obsolete. A bill substantially nullifying the naturalization laws was reported in the Senate a few days ago and as its leading feature is to obstruct white men in their right to vote, it is very certain of being enacted into a law before the final adjournment.

Even Simon Cameron has become ashamed and disgusted with the corruption and imbecility of his Radical friends in Congress, and not long since, in some remarks in reply to a Western Senator, administered the following well-timed rebuke to the Radical majority:

> "The Senator from Illinois says that the country expects us to pass a tariff bill, expects us to pass a currency bill, expects us to pass the Georgia bill. I do not believe the country expects any such thing. My belief is that the country expects us to pass the appropriations necessary to carry on the government, reduce the taxes, and then go home and attend to our own private affairs. When we are at home we do no harm to the public, and while we are here we do very little good; and, therefore I ask the sooner we get off the better for ourselves, and the better for the country."

Black Against Wilson.

The February number of the Atlantic Monthly contained an elaborate and carefully prepared article under the title, "EDWIN M. STANTON," written by HENRY WILSON, one of the Senators of the United States from Massachusetts. The writer had two purposes in view, the first of which was to wilfully and knowingly, defame and misrepresent the administration of JAMES BUCHANAN, and to criminate and malign the reputation of certain members of his Cabinet at the outbreak of the late civil war, and especially to impugn the patriotism and devotion to the constitution of his country of one of the foremost and brightest men that Pennsylvania has ever produced—JEREMIAH S. BLACK, President BUCHANAN's Attorney General when the rebellion commenced; and, secondly, to even asperse and next to eulogize and defend EDWIN M. STANTON, who for a time was the succesor of Judge BLACK and subsequently Secretary of War under Mr. Lincoln. We would like to publish Senator WILSON's article and Judge BLACK's reply, (the latter having just appeared,) in order that the bane and the antidote might go to our readers together, but the great length of the productions of both these gentlemen, and the limited space of our columns, forbid it.

That there has been an astonishing and persistent amount of wilful falsehood and bold and reckless misrepresentation written and spoken about JAMES BUCHANAN and his Cabinet, and their official connection with the secession from the Union of the Southern States, we have all along been well aware of. The truth of History, however, and especially the official acts of any administration, of whatever party, in reference to so important and vital a question as the great civil war through which this country has passed, cannot successfully be ignored or finally misinterpreted or misrepresented by demagogues, under the special, and, in these latter days, hypocritical plea of that hackneyed, but much abused term, "Loyalty." It is well for the perfect vindication of history that Judge BLACK is now living, and that he is gifted with the ability to write such a manly and vigorous reply to the silly and venomous essay of WILSON. We in Cambria county, the old neighbors and friends of JERRY BLACK, as he is familiarly called, feel a just and an honest pride in all that concerns his fair name and reputation. We feel that he is a part and parcel of us, where his earliest professional efforts were first made, and where he is well and honorably remembered. We have watched steadily his upward and onward career, and with his honors now thick blushing upon him, we can proudly point to him as an honored son of his native State—pure and beyond all reproach.

In disposing of this correspondence, we will simply say, that in view of the terrible scathing that Judge BLACK has so triumphantly administered to HENRY WILSON, who dishonors the seat that was once immortalized by DANIEL WEBSTER—he who was so appropriately styled the "great expounder of the constitution"—Mr. HENRY WILSON deserves the heart-felt sympathy and commiseration of the American people.

The Fenian Raid.

An attempt was made in the early part of last week by certain misguided, but honest and enthusiastic, Irishmen, to invade the Dominion of Canada. The leader of the movement was Gen. O'NEILL, who figured prominently in the same kind of an expedition three years ago, and which terminated quite as disastrously as the present. The number of men who repaired to the borders of Vermont is not exactly known, but they were about as formidable and successful as the celebrated army of a certain king of France, of whom it was written:

> "The King of France with thirty thousand men, > Marched up the hill, and then marched down again."

The whole affair has ended, as every man of common sense knew it would end, in a miserable and disgraceful failure. Gen. O'NIELL has been captured by the United States Marshall of Vermont, and in default of bail has been committed to the jail of Burlington, in that State. The whole thing has been a signal failure. We will not enlarge on the subject, but will append to these remarks, the following sensible and straightforward article from the Pittsburgh Post every word of which we heartily endorse:

> We have frequently used the means within our sphere, by way of council to our Irish population, to cut loose from heartless demagogues, who play upon their feelings, and to listen to those who were really their friends, that it has been siezed upon to our disadvantage. We have been represented as unfriendly to the cause of freedom in Ireland, and wanting in sympathy to that people. As these columns are not the proper place to explain why this could not be so, we must be content to rest under whatever charges designing and unprincipled men may choose to make. We again reiterate in the very midst of this Fenian torrent, that our knowledge of a few of the leaders, justifies us in repeating that they are unprincipled scoundrels, obtaining money under false pretences, and deluding honest men to their own destruction. Men and women, boys and girls, have been importuned to give up their hard earned wages, to get up expeditions, to make war upon a nation with which we are at peace, and which, under every principle of international law, strengthened by special treaty, this government is bound to interrupt, or be prepared to accept war itself. Sunburst bonds, payable when Ireland is free, have been imposed upon thousands, and the money spent by mountebanks who may well laugh at their dupes. Of the many thousand who are now adrift over the country, how many of them know the plans of the leaders. They go it blind, resting content with the assurance that General O'NIELL and a few others equally daring and wise will guide them to success.
> All this is humiliating to a people whose blood has watered every field where human rights have been tested by force; whose genius is the admiration of the world; whose whole history has been a struggle against incessant persecution; and it becomes doubly painful to cotemplate the increased suffering which those now in Ireland must endure from the abortive attempts made in this country, to assail England through one of her colonies. Every such attempt affords a pretext to impose additional penalties and furnish arguments to the inveterate foes of the Irish race, country and religion.

AN unsuccessful attempt was made to fire the stable attached to Schmidt's hotel, Altoona, last Saturday morning.

[From the Pittsburgh Commercial.]

XVIIth Congressional District.

Letter from Hon. A. A. Barker in His Own Defense.

EBENSBURG, MAY 22, 1870.

To the Editor of the Pittsburgh Commercial:

A late number of the COMMERCIAL contained an article, signed (ironically, I suppose,) "Truth," which teemed with falsehood from beginning to end. Averse to newspaper controversy, I should let the precious production pass for what it is worth, did not duty to myself, my family, my friends and the Republican party of this district impel me to expose the untruth of this "Truth"-ful scribbler. I note the falsehoods of Truth:

1st. It is false that he writes "you a brief statement of facts in regard to the Republican County Convention." There are no facts in the statement.

2d. It is false that "there is little or no opposition throughout the district to Mr. Morrell's candidacy." Outside of the works controlled by that gentleman, there is a very decided feeling of opposition to him in the Republican party.

3d. It is false that the local question of court or county seat was used against Mr. Morrell, or that he lost a single deligate because of that question.

4th. It is false, as asserted, that "A. A. Barker was long an aspirant, and has always been cross when refused a nomination." I received the nomination at least fairly, when I ran for and was elected to Congress, and was beaten for a re-nomination because I recommended Hon. Evan Roberts for Postmaster of Johnstown against the will of Mr. Morrell and a few of his friends, and in accordance with the expressed wishes of a large majority of the people of Johnstown.

5th. It is false that my "opposition to Hon. S. S. Blair in 1862 gave the district to the Democrats." Mr. Blair was defeated by a "combination" in his own county, running about four hundred behind the State ticket, and ran but little behind his ticket in Cambria, and as much of that in the south of the county as in the north. He also ran largely behind his ticket in Huntingdon county. In 1862, when S. S. Blair was renominated for a third term, as well as in 1866, when Mr. Morrell was nominated over me, I was editor and proprietor of the Alleghanian, and indorsed the nomination of both these gentlemen.

6th. It is false that I "combined with R. L. Johnston, of Ebensburg, and the Andy Johnson party, in 1860." On the contrary, while giving Mr. Morrell the influence of my paper, I opposed President Johnson, and urged his impeachment, on all occasions.

7th. It is false, absolutely false, and an unmitigated lie, and I throw it in the face of the veritable scribbler (Truth) with proud contempt, that I never supported a Congressional nominee unless I was a candidate myself. It is a well known fact that I opened the campaign in 1868, and labored with all my heart and soul, as well as in 1858 and 1860. But this falsehood can be answered by Mr. Morrell himself, who, after his election in 1868, took my hand and thanked me in the warmest terms for my constant labors in his favor during the campaign;—while his immediate friends assured me that they hoped that the time would soon arrive when they could reciprocate by supporting me. Nay, from the beginning of the campaign of 1856 till the present time, my effort has been to build up the Republican party, and I do not boast when I say that I have addressed more Republican meetings in Cambria county than all the others in the county put together. In 1868, when Mr. Morrell was re-elected, I devoted my whole energies to the campaign, and made as many as five speeches in a single week, yet the Truth-ful scribbler says that I never supported a Congressional nominee unless I was a candidate.

8th, It is false that I spent "all last winter at Harrisburg with bills to divide the village of Ebensburg into four wards." The Burgess and Town Council of Ebensburg asked the division into four wards, and the petition was supported by 190 voters of Ebensburg, and yet, this being a local question entirely, Mr. Morrell and his friends interfered to prevent it, while at the same time new wards and new districts have annually been multiplied in the south of the county without objections.

9th. It is false that the convention was called at an unusual time and to subserve the purpose of Mr. Barker. In 1864 and 1866 the convention was called in May, and only a few days later than it was the present year. The convention was called by the written request of the majority of the County Committee.

10th. It is false, pitifully false, that a young Democrat "acted as one of the Secretaries" of the minority Convention, and that the protest which you published was promptly furnished the Democratic papers of the county. Mr. Abel Lloyd, of Ebensburgh, a true Republican, was Secretary of the Minority Convention, and the only Secretary of the Convention. Having trespassed too far upon your time, I will close by saying that I have given you the facts in the case, and facts that I challenge contradiction, and subscribe myself, truly yours.

A. A. BARKER.

HONESTY IN POLITICS.—Morrell, the present Radical member of Congress from the Cambria district in this State, has been forced upon the party for re-election by the most open and glaring frauds. The protest of the anti-Morrell delegates, who put the Hon. Samuel Calvin in the field as their choice, says. "When we assert that corrupt means were employed in order to secure delegates, and that there are those sitting in this Convention who do not honesely represent the people, we state what is too painfully apparent to all, and we firmly believe that nominations so made cannot command the suffrages of those who prize honesty in politics. On the contrary, those who believe purity essential in nominations and elections, will spurn the candidate placed before the people corruptly, as a nomination not fit to be made." This is the language of Radical delegates, not ours, and it is no dull shaft. It pierces the armor of the Radical party and shows by what means men are put upon their tickets. Mr. Morrell has a subsidized sentiment in his favor, but he is opposed by a large majority of honest men in the Radical party, and these men have a candidate of their own and mean to support him. The Post cannot cover up this breach by attempts to belittle the friends of Mr. Calvin. Among them are some of the strongest Radical poiticians in Cambria county who will not be dragooned into the support of Mr. Morrell. As to Mr. Morrell's oppostion to free trade, that can be better estimated when viewed in the light of a man voting money into his own pocket, by increasing the price of articles manufactured by him.—Phila. Age.

—At the recent election in Centralia, Ill., J. I. Jackson, a negro Radical, defeated C. H. Day, a white Radical, for Alderman, which result was stigmatized by the Radical organ of that place as a "malicious movement." The dishonesty of the white Radicals is strikingly exhibited in their exhibition of ill-feeling at the political success of a member of the negro wing of their party.

General News Items.

—Senator Revel's sister, Eliza, is in the poor house in New York. Brick Pomeroy is raising a subscription for her.

—A young man was stung by a bee in Chester county last week, which flew into his ear. He died in less than half an hour.

—The Louisville Courier Journal is of the opinion that if anything could atone for the infamous conduct of Gen. Ames in Mississippi, it is the reflection that he is to have Ben. Butler for a father-in-law.

—An exchange says: Housewives who are annoyed with muddy water on wash days, might do well to remember that a piece of alum as large as a walnut will clear, as bright as crystal, a whole hogshead of turbid water.

—A colored man in New York voted the Democratic ticket in the Eighteenth ward. Seventeen other colored voters followed him up, and as the Tribune sweetly remarks, "punched his head." The usual Radical argument.

—The Democratic majority in New York now foots up over ninety-one thousand.—Tee offcial figures add to the estimated and reported majorities. The figures will reach 95,000. What a glorious result for the white man's party!

—As a man and his wife, residing in Keo'tuk county, Iowa, were returning, last week, from the funeral of the last of their three children, who had died of scarlet fever, a thunder storm came up, and just as they were entering the gate of their desolated house the lightning struck their carriage. The man was instantly killed, and his wife is now a raving maniac.

—At Dayton, Ohio, at an early hour on Sunday morning last, an entire family, the man, Frederick Moeller, a German woman and five children, from eleven years old down to two years of age, were suffocated, and an infant, four weeks old, was badly burned. Mrs. Moeller was alive when rescued, but soon died. The babe will recover. The fire was the result of carelessness.

—During the prevalence of the violent storm of Saturday week a large quantity of sulphur was precipitated upon certain portions of the township of Hanover, York county. A tin pan exposed in the yard of Dr. Hakes exhibited a deposit of some fifty grains of the mineral. Such a phenomena must have led the people in that locality to imagine that the latter day was near at hand, and to count up their transgressions with all possible speed.

—The West Chester Republican says a horrible tragedy occurred on Saturday night last, near Clifton Station, on the West Chester and Philadelphia Railroad, Upper Darby township, Delaware county. It appears that an old man named Clay, whose son keeps store in Chester, was traveling along the road in company with his daughter, a grown woman, and it is said they had been drinking. She had a hatchet with her, and struck him with the blade thereof, just under and behind one ear, repeatedly, almost severing the head from the body. The corpse was not discovered until the next morning. Coroner Rigby summoned a jury and held an inquest. The daughter was taken into custody.

—A terrific thunder storm passed over Canton, Bradford county, Saturday. The New York Circus was about commencing their performance when the storm struck them. The tent was instantly blown on the heads of the audience, and a terrible scene ensued. The horse became unmanageable through fright, broke away and dashed madly around, which, with the screams of the women, the terrific thunder, and last, but not least, the rain which poured in torrents, caused a scene that beggars discription.—The tent was finally held up by the men while the women and children made their escape—probably the "wettest" lot of humanity ever congregated in the vicinity.—One child is reported severely injured and numerous slightly so. During the same storm a house, about four miles north of Canton, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground.

A GOOD FELLOW THAT CAN KEEP A HOTEL.—H. G. Smith, of the Lancaster Daily Intelligencer, who has been on a visit to Cape May, pays the following well deserved compliment to that most popular landlord, Mr. George Bolton:

Hotels depend greatly for success upon the qualifications of those who have the management of them. There is much meaning in the slang phraze, "he is a good fellow, but he can't keep a hotel." To "run" a a first-class establishment on the American principle of hotel keeping requires a combination of talents of a rare order. He who would succeed must show military precisen in the ordering of his army of servants, while he meets his guests with unvarying smiles and unruffled politeness of manner. He must remember faces which he has seen but once, and be able to recall the multitude of names recorded from time to time on his register. He must be very liberal in providing for all the wants of an exacting public, and methodically correct and economical in the management of his varied business transactions. Men of the class we have attempted to describe are rare, but they make fortunes. Mr. Geo. Bolton, proprietor of the Bolton House at Harrisburg, and part proprietor and sole manager of the Columbia House at Cape May, is one of those rare men of whom it can be truthfully said "he is a good fellow and can keep a hotel." He keeps two of the best and most popular establishments in the country. He makes his guests feel perfectly at home, and those who put up with him are not only sure to return, but, as they do so, they recall the lines of the poet who said:

> The traveler along life's weary way must often sigh,
> To think he has found his warmest welcome at an inn.

The Columbia House occupies the most eligible location on the Island, has the handsomest grounds, and is in all its departments admirably arranged as it is well conducted.

A REMARKABLE FAMILY.—The Holson (Tenn.) Journal says: There is, perhaps, the most remarkable family of people in this county that there is in the broad limits of the United States of America. We have published the facts in regard to it. The name of this family is Webb. The father of all the Webbs was named Theodorick, and the mother was named Catharine.—They were both from Buckingham county, Va.; were of German extraction; were married in the year 1795, and lived together fifty-seven years. Their immediate family consisted of seven sons and five daughters, and they raised them all at one spot, in Poor Valley, within twelve miles of Rogersville. The old man died in the year 1852, aged eighty-four years, and the old lady in the year 1870, and but a few weeks ago, aged eighty-four years. At the time of old Mrs. Webb's death, their offspring numbered 216 of whom 176 were living and 40 dead. Of this immense progeny there are to-day living the whole of the original 12 children, 86 grandchildren, and 77 great grandchildren, all of whom are in good health.

CONTINENTAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,
OF HARTFORD, CONN.
Samuel E. Elmore, Pres't. - - Francis D. Douglass, Sec'y.

THIS COMPANY ranks among the first class Life Insurance Companies doing business in Massachusetts, and by complying with the laws of that State, insures perfect safety to her Policy Holders. It grants 50 per cent loan of premium on Life Policies to its Insured, and by applying all the cash collected from its members to Insurance, gives the largest Insurance attainable for the amount of money invested. Its profits are divided among the Policy Holders, and its Dividends have never been less than 50 per cent., thus bringing the net cost of the Insurance within the most limited means, and affording the protection of a Policy on terms not excelled by any Company.

Trustworthy and reliable men are wanted to act as agents for this Company in Cambria and adjoining counties, and with such the most liberal arrangements will be made. To those who may be unacquainted with the business, full instructions and aid will be most cheerfully rendered whenever desirable or available.

ery Rev. Hugh Gallagher, of San Francis reached this place on Thursday night having made the trip by railroad in the in short space of eight days, inclusive of a of several hours in Chicago. The Rev. eman looks as young and hearty as in days , and his presence was a source of great ure to the many earnest friends who lis to his instructive discourse at the Catho church here on Sunday last. Father Gallagh at present on a visit to Washington city, will return to the mountains for a more ex ed sojourn in course of a month or so.

ur readers prepared to believe that wheel of a two horse wagon, heavily laden and, passed over the full length of a little without inflicting any but the most trivial s upon him? And yet we are assured a four year old son of Mr. Jas. Convery, of met with just such a mishap on Mon evening last, and that he is little if any the for the accident. Unnoticed by any one, little fellow attempted to get on a wagon his father was driving, but fell between the front and hind wheels, the latter of ran up one of his legs, over his body and his shoulder. Certainly a most miraculous from serious injury if not from death.

Mr. Wm. D. Price, of Cambria twp., is said have had both his arms very badly lacerated his own dog, on Wednesday evening last. story is, that the dog started from the house pursuit of a wagon which was being driven the road, and that Mr. P. called to the to come back, but failing in that, he ed up several stones and began to throw after the dog, whereupon the ferocious turned upon him and a tussle for the ery forthwith commenced between the and the brute, but it seems that before as ce had reached him Mr. P. got the worst bargain. The dog was promptly shot the morning, and the wounded man is now g as well as could be expected.

That it will not do in all cases to judge from side appearances, was plainly exemplified in case of Grady's Old-Fashioned Circus, which bited in this place on Wednesday last. The side display and appearance of this show far short of the usual make-up of such es lishments, but when it came to the real mer of the exhibitions—when the skill of the formers were put to the test—those who present found that they were enjoying a varied and better rendered entertainment has probably ever been before given in place. The proprietor and his employees, won golden opinions for their gentlemanly while here, and we can say for them they deserve the patronage of all who ap ciate such exhibitions, no matter where they pitch their tent."

A most contemptible piece of vandalism and larceny was perpetrated at the Catholic tery in this place on Monday afternoon , immediately after the procession engaged decorating the soldiers' graves had passed the grounds, a country woman and her son proceeded to despoil one of the ves of a small flag and a bouquet of flowers had been placed upon it. With their ill ten booty they returned to their wagon, on the road near by, but the boy soon a second visit to the cemetery, and was despoiling another grave of its trophies a young lady, who had witnessed the pro ings from the window of a neighboring , called to him to desist, whereupon he left hurry, and clambered into the wagon, after the two vandals drove off at full speed.

OUR FALLEN BRAVES.—The sacred and imposing ceremony of decorating with flowers, evergreens, etc., the graves of those brave men who offered up their lives as a sacrifice to their country during the late rebellion, took place, in accordance with programme, on Monday last.

The procession formed at the Court House at 1½ o'clock, and were marched into the court room, where a brief but feeling and appropriate address was delivered by R. L. Johnston, Esq., after which the procession again formed on the outside of the building and proceeded first to the Catholic cemetery in the following order:

Silk Flag Draped in Mourning, carried by Serg't Ed. Humphries.
Martial Band.
Chief Marshal, Col. R. Litzinger.
Officiating Clergymen.
Floral Committee consisting of sixty tastefully dressed young ladies in charge of Ass't Marshal J. D. Barkley.
Students of Mt. Gallitzin Seminary.
Delegation of Ladies.
Soldiers of the late War, commanded by Capt. T. W. Dick.
Citizens under direction of Assistant Marshal A. G. Fry.

After the decorating services had been gone through with at the Catholic graveyard Rev. R. C. Christy, pastor of the church, delivered an able and impressive address, in which he paid a hasty but comprehensive tribute to the memory of the thousands of brave spirits who had laid down their lives in the great and sanguinary struggle through which our country has so recently passed—many, very many of whose graves would not that day be strewn with flowers and other emblems of the deep affection and heartfelt gratitude of living friends. At the conclusion of Father Christy's remarks, the procession re-formed and proceeded to the Congregational cemetery, where the same sacred rites were performed, and where Rev. G. W. Klendenan, pastor of the U. Brethren church, made a few eloquent remarks which did honor alike to his head and his heart, and were eminently befitting the occasion.

This over, the column took up its line of march for Lloyd's cemetery, a short distance from town, where no less than thirteen fallen heroes sleep the sleep of death. The graves of all were elaborately decorated and hallowed by the presence and offerings of admiring friends, after which Rev. T. R. Jones, pastor of the Congregational church, paid a touching tribute to the memory of those whom it was sought to honor in this public and commendable manner, and hoped that their brave deeds and unsullied names would ever be held in grateful remembrance by their countrymen, from whom a deep debt of gratitude was due to their memories. In the centre of the cemetery was then erected a large cross, to which was attached an immense wreath bearing the following inscription: "To the memory of our dead who sleep on Southern battle fields." This duty attended to, Wm. H. Sechler, Esq., proceeded to address the assemblage, reminding them of the brave soldiers whose bones are now perhaps bleaching upon gory fields far away, where they had met death in its most appalling form—whose shattered remains had not received the rites of Christian sepulchre—and in whose behalf the erection of this sacred memorial was but a meagre tribute. Mr. Sechler's remarks were full of pathos, and were well calculated to call forth a tear to the memories of those brave, dear ones who found their last resting place on some dreary Southern plain.

With the conclusion of Mr. S.'s remarks closed the ceremonies of the day, and the procession thereupon returned to the Court House and was disbanded, all participants feeling that they had performed a sacred duty which they owed to those true men who had lost their lives in defence of their country's honor.

So ended the second observance in our midst of Decoration Day; but before we conclude let us say that the ladies of Ebensburg deserve special commendation for the labor of love they performed in donating flowers, making wreaths and assisting in the decoration services. For the aid thus rendered we have been requested to return to one and all the sincere thanks of the returned soldiers, as well as of the friends and kindred of the departed ones, who desire especially to express their appreciation of the good work done by the floral committee on said occasion.

Men Who Advertise.—The object of making known the business of any man through the colums of a newspaper is of course to attract the attention of those who read the paper, and if possible to induce them to deal with the merchant or other person who appeals to them for patronage in this way. When men therefore pay the printer for announcing that they have received a new stock of goods which they are selling at lowest cash prices, or that they are prepared to do a certain kind of work or to attend to a specified business, they do so in hopes of getting their money back by attracting the custom of their fellow men. And it is such as these that deserve to succeed, for they hide not their light under a bushel and fear not to make public announcement of what they are prepared and pledged to do by the very terms of their cards. To such men as these can be traced the prosperity of the community in which they live, and among that class in our own town it is drawing no invidious distinction to name Messrs. R. R. Davis, A. G. Fry, H. A. Shoemaker & Co., and V. S. Barker, who deal extensively in all kinds of dry goods, clothing, notions, groceries, etc.—E. J. Mills, who represents the best mills in the country in the line of flour, feed and produce—and George Huntley, the man who keeps a more extensive, more varied and more select stock of hardware, queensware, farming utensils, and other goods in his line, than any other dealer in them far or near. These merchants all solicit patronage because they believe they deserve it, and feel they can make it to the interest of buyers to extend to them a leberal custom, and in this we feel sure that neither of them will fail to do all that can be done by any one who pretends to do business and make a living at it.

The Very Best.—Munson's Copper Tubular Lightning Rod, with Spiral Flanges, has been erected on thousands of buildings in all parts of the United States; and in a test of thirteen years, no instance of their inefficiency has occurred. It has received the first premiums at many State Fairs and Institutes, and was never beaten in any scientific contest. It has been endorsed by over five hundred Professors of Colleges and scientific men, as the best rod ever invented, possessing all the elements required to protect buildings from lightning. Its power surpasses twenty iron rods, or a solid copper rod an inch and a half thick. It does not get out of order, but will endure as long as the building stands on which it is erected. No holes are made in slate or tin roofs, and in every respect the utmost satisfaction is guaranteed.—The attention of Architects and Builders is respectfully called to the merits of this rod. Manufactured by LOCKHART & Co., 234 Penn street, Pittsburgh, and put up in Cambria county only by RICHARD JONES, Johnstown, Pa., who will promptly execute work entrusted to him in the most perfect and satisfactory manner. P. O. Box 50, Johnstown, Pa.

Slightly Mistaken.—Many of our readers have no doubt heard of that sublimely verdant individual who concluded that "Mr. Co." must be a wonderfully rich man, because his name appeared on so many sign-boards and he seemed to be mixed up in all kinds of money-making business. Our innocent friend did not exactly comprehend the situation, and perhaps he will be still further surprised when we assure him that "Mr. Co." has gone into partnership with our next door neighbor, M. L. Oatman—he whose establishment has recently been transmogrified from a plain grocery store to the most extensive, full stocked and finest arranged dry goods, grocery, notion, clothing, queensware and glassware emporium in Northern Cambria. Yes, sir, the establishment is now presided over by M. L. Oatman & Co., and you bet that they have gone to work with their sleeves rolled up and fully determined to do the biggest kind of business on the most liberal kind of terms. So if you want to see a superb stock and get superb bargains you should by all means consult our and energetic neighbors, Oatman & Co., who are well prepared to supply the wants of all classes of customers.

The Right Place.—People who visit Loretto at any time, as well as those who do their purchasing in that borough, should not fail to look in on the magnificent stock of goods, of every kind, which is now on exhibition at the first class mercantile establishment of A. J. Christy, who is offering special inducements to the buyers of dry goods, groceries, drugs, and other articles, of which he has a splendid assortment. Low prices, superb goods and cash sales is the line Mr. C. proposes to fight it out on, if his friends only back him, as they should do.

Auction Sale.—An extensive auction sale will be held on THURSDAY, JUNE 9th, at 11 A. M., at the saw mill of Long & Bracken, four miles from Gallitzin Station, Pa. R. R., comprising a superior limestone Farm of 240 acres, with good buildings and excellent springs of water; also, one extra good Portable Saw Mill, (built by Blandy, Zanesville, Ohio,) Horses, Oxen, Harness, Wagons, Ploughs, and many other mill and farming implements, etc., etc. Good bargains can no doubt be obtained at this great sale.

Tempus Fugit.—That is Latin for "Time flies," and has no reference to "Shoo fly!" or those other kind of flies, but leads us to say that if you want to see it in all its glory you should visit the greatly enlarged clock, watch, jewelry and fancy goods emporium of C. T. Roberts, who plays boss over one of the finest and best stocked establishments of the kind in Western Pennsylvania. Go and see Cham's splendid display, and then buy what you need.

...Mr. T. R. Evans, the photograph artist, has recently completed a most superb ivorytype likeness of a deceased lady, and which he proposes to take with him to photographer's convention to be held in Cleveland early this month. It is a work of art of which he may well be proud, and the process required in its production was in a great measure original with Mr. Evans. It should by all means secure a premium.

What Will He Do With It?—People wondered what Mr. Wanamaker wanted to enlarge his Oak Hall for. Let them look in there one of these fine mornings and the crowded salesroom will answer their question.

Local Correspondence.

JOHNSTOWN, May 30, 1870.

Dear Freeman—A visit to Sandy Vale Cemetery disclosed the fact that Mr. Jacob Horner, the proprietor, has put up an ingenious iron gate which lifts by a pulley and works admirably, and can be drawn down and fastened with the greatest ease. Mr. H. is going to have the fact patented.

Hon. D. J. Morrell is home on a visit, looking hearty and cheery. He is a hard-working man on committees and the like, but still he looks none the worse of the wear, and continues to bear his honors as meekly as ever.

Conemaugh borough is looking up in the line of improvements. Several of the streets are to be graded and paved, new sewers made, and many other improvements inaugurated. Go ahead, Conemaugh!

Workmen are busily engaged in extending the water facilities at the head of Main street, thus supplying a new district with "wildcat" water. In this instance the water is made to run up hill.

Great preparations have been made for decorating to-day the graves of soldiers who fell in the late unnatural and fratricidal war. A number of committees have had the preliminaries in hand for several days, and the probabilities are that the sacred duty will be attended to in an elaborate and becoming manner.

Notwithstanding the fact that rain has fallen in abundance of late, the streams hereabouts have very little water flowing in their channels. If the rain should cease to fall for a month or so, the rivers would go high and dry.

We have received the June number of the "Teachers' Advocate," which, in our opinion, is the handsomest paper published in the county and it richly deserves to be supported by all "law abiding" and peacefully disposed citizens.

The market here is already supplied with currents, strawberries, rhubarb, and such like, and it makes one's teeth water to look at a box of the delicious berries which he is not able to purchase; for, be it remembered, the price is higher than the tariff of 1842.

A little boy named Bloch got badly burned, one day last week in Conemaugh borough by setting his clothes on fire with matches which he was carrying about with him. He will hardly recover from the fearful accident.

The circus which was here was not appreciated by the people, and it did not seem to appreciate the place; so it pitched its tent and left for parts unknown.

Itinerant peddlers, in great numbers, appeared simultaneously with the circus and are no doubt part and parcel of the shebang. Some of them were boisterous fellows.

Dry goods are coming down in price, but provisions keep up wonderfully. There is but little change or reduction in the price of groceries and provisions from the prices that ruled during the war. Butter and eggs are exceptions just now.

The Crawford County System does not appear to have many friends in this end of the county; and yet, if its friends turn out at the election, and its opponents remain at home, it will doubtless carry. Eight or ten votes in each district would carry the county in its favor.

A man named Patick Harkins was killed in the coal mines at South Fork on the 25th day of May. He was brought to Johnstown for interment, but the funeral rites were delayed by the coroner, who claimed the right to hold an inquest. His death was caused by the fall of a large quantity of coal.

Carncross & Dixie's minstrels will open up here on the 2d inst., and continue from day to day as long as minstrelsy is popular.

The Kickenepawling B. B. Club had a spat with France & Lannier's theatrical troupe at the game of base ball, one day last week. The "Kicks" outscored the troupe.

Vine street in Johnstown is to be paved at last. The threat to pave it was made years ago, but it has not yet been executed.

A girl named Scott, who was employed at the Woodvale Woolen Factory, had two of her fingers cut off by a pair of shears, or a shearing machine, on last Wednesday.

A pic-nic was held at East Conemaugh on last Saturday for the purpose of raising money to establish a young man's library.

Braddocks Independent Cornet Band will discourse sweet music, June 6th, at Hansman's Hall in Hornerstown, 4th ward, and all who wish can trip on the "light fantastic toe."

The Tribune wonders why the butchers prefer red, white and blue, when they get a sign painted. We suppose it is because they are butchers. The red represents the blood, the white stands foremost good meat and the blue for tainted meat. They fight for their flag and are always at war to the knife.

There were three runaway teams apprehended in town last week. One was the team of Mr. Geis, of Richland township—one a team of the Street Commissioners, and the other a team of the Cambria Iron Company. Not much damage done, though some damning.

The German Theatrical Troupe of this place will give two entertainments at Union Hall on June 6th and 7th. They perform well.

Johnstown Councils have passed an ordinance creating the office of Borough Solicitor, at a salary of $500 per year.

The Co-operative Library Association here have received some new books, and E. Y. Townsend, Esq., of the Cambria Iron Company, has purchased ten memberships, which are to be given to the most worthy persons named by the teacher of the High School.

Ascension Day was well observed here, if one may judge from the immense throng that attended religious services in the morning. The Catholic churches here are growing immensely in membership.

Almost every evening last week a man was seen on the public square, selling prize packages, which is only another name for a lottery. We have been informed that a good many people fooled away their money, and didn't get a prize neither. One man got six half dollars in silver for twelve whole dollars in paper.

The little village springing up two miles west of town is to be called Morrellville. We had christened it South Dale, because it was just opposite Coopersdale, southward. If it is not called South Dale, why not just called Morrelle?

An examination of teachers for professional certificates is to be held, on the 18th day of June, by County Superintendent Chapman, at the Union School House, Johnstown. One question likely will be "Is Jupiter fourteen times as large as the earth?" See "The Immensity of Creation." Only a mistake, Thomas!

Yours, &c., ROB ROY M'GREGGOR.

CARROLLTOWN, May 30, 1870.

Dear Freeman—As predicted in my last letter, our lumbermen have been favored with a splendid flood, and I understand that every one of the large number of rafts moored in the river have got off, though it is to be regretted that the flood failed them after getting as far as Lock Haven; still, to quote a homely saying, "a half loaf is better than no bread," and as they have got out of the upper waters, the chances for rafting floods are greatly improved.

Last Thursday, being Ascension Day, was well observed here, the vast congregation of St. Benedict's having turned out in full force to participate in the devotional exercises at the church. On that day our village was honored with the presence of a number of gentlemen from your town, who spent the day with us in a pleasant manner, and betook themselves, I dare say unwillingly, toward home in the evening. I noticed among others the pleasant countenance of MACSHANE, of the Freeman. You were all welcome, gentlemen,—come soon and often.

The good people of St. Boniface (Glosser's settlement) and all lovers of a day's recreation who desire to participate with them, are to have a pic-nic on Monday next, June 6th. To any person acquainted with the hospitality of the people of that section, nothing need be said in regard to the good cheer and pleasant enjoyment in store for all who participate; but to those who are unacquainted with the genial spirits in that "neck of timber," I need only say, go and see, and if you come away dissatisfied you are much harder to please in such matters than I have any idea of. Let all who can do so take part in the approaching festivities at St. Boniface.

The already extensive brewery of Mr. Julius Stich is being improved and the facilities for making a larger amount of the excellent article of beer for which it is so widely celebrated are being increased by the addition of an immense new kettle. Success to all such men of energy as Mr. Stich!

The coming election, by which is to be determined the method of making future Democratic nominations, is beginning to occupy a little more of the attention of the people hereabouts than when I last wrote you, and it is probable that by the day of the election very considerable interest will be manifested in the matter.—The views of our people, however, seem to be as varied as the propositions themselves, and so far there is little or no unanimity of choice apparent. It is gratifying, nevertheless, to notice an increasing disposition on part of the people to go to the polls on Saturday next and vote for one or other of the systems proposed. Again I would urge every Democratic voter to deposit his ballot on this occasion, and henceforth let there be peace and satisfaction regarding nominations made as they will be in accordance with the expressed wishes of the people.

From all parts of Northern Cambria comes the most cheering reports as to the prospects for an abundant harvest and a more than usually prolific yield of fruits of all kinds. May these pleasing indications continue to the end. E.

Last Words.—One history says the last words of one of the greatest patriots that ever lived were: Go to Leopold & Bro.'s made-up Clothing Depot, 241 Main street, Johnstown, and get your measure taken for a superb suit for summer wear, and take a look at their nice clothing for men and boys. Don't get into the furniture store, or else you might buy a settee or something, but go in at No. 241 and call immediately for a hundred dollars' worth of clothing, etc.

Do Good.—We live in this world to do all the good we can, and no man can do better pet than to buy all his dry goods and groceries from that prince of good fellows, N. F. Carroll, No. 215 (opposite the theatre) Main street, Johnstown. The more you buy the greater good will be done, both to yourself and to our friend Carroll, from whom dry goods and groceries can be bought a spot lower than at any other store thereabouts.

Ran Off.—A gentleman in Johnstown went to M. H. Mayer's last week and bought a suit of the splendid made-up clothing found at No. 214, Opera House, Johnstown—a full blown wedding suit—and then ran off to the Smoky City and got married! Lots more of the same kind of suits left. You can't miss the place if you go in at the right door—214 Main street. Go, we beseech you—go and do likewise.

MacShane on the Rampage.

Dear Freeman—Last week I got us safely out of the great Central Park. We left it on the north side and took the favorite drive known, I believe, as Harlam Avenue. This is a most delightful drive, and we had scarcely time to admire the face of the country and its scenery, so much taken up were we with the various "turn outs" with which the Avenue was constantly alive.

Here you could witness the dashing side of New York life. The richest mounted phætons and the most showy buggies—indeed, every vehicle of every shape, size and appearance—dashed by us, not occasionally, not frequently, but in a constant, never ceasing procession. At times as many as three or four teams were abreast on the spacious boulevard.

Our open carriage, with its well trained pair of livery horses, though it would have been "just the cheese" in Ebensburg, was a heavy looking, homely, lumbering concern alongside the aristocratic equipages that whizzed by and around us on every side like meteors.

We commend the pride and munificence of New York in this: While her drives are much finer, over a much more picturesque country, and the roads broader and better paved than in Philadelphia, no such thing as a toll-gate is to be found on any of her drives; while in the latter city the prominent drives, such as the Germantown Avenue and Wissahickon Road, have toll-gates every few miles. When I informed my comrade of this he would scarcely credit it, but was afterwards convinced of the fact when a Quaker City gate-keeper told him. The custom of charging toll for driving on a public thoroughfare is peculiar to Philadelphia, and should be abolished.

But to return to New York. Our drive was extended to that well known object of attraction, the High Bridge. This magnificent structure conducts the Croton water over the Harlam river at an immense altitude. We clambered up the hill and on to the bridge, where we had a grand view up and down the river. The bridge itself, in its architectural design and structure, is a wonderful work. Its floor is well paved with pressed brick, and over it may be seen passing at all hours of the day an incessant stream of pedestrians. Although large enough and strong enough for the purpose, the bridge is not designed to be traversed by wagons. Indeed, vehicles, or even equestrians, could not ascend the high bluffs which lead to the bridge at either end. This bridge and its aqueduct conveys the Croton to New York Island and supplies the city with all the water it needs, besides furnishing a great deal that is made into milk.

Returning by the same route, we again passed through the Park and reached the celebrated Fifth Avenue before sundown. Here is an Avenue lined for miles with princely palaces. A residence on Fifth Avenue is the highest earthly ambition of a genuine New Yorker. That residence procures respectability, for in New York wealth is respectability. The means by which wealth is secured is a minor consideration. The axiom of the elder Weller, "Get money, Samivel—honestly, if you can; but—get money!" receives full application here. Thus it is that while there are many truly respectable families whose escutcheons know no stain, there are more whose

> "Ignoble blood
> Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood."

Here, in one of the very finest mansions, lives Madame Restell, the famous or infamous abortionist, in a style of queenly splendor. Here Sarsaparilla Townsend projected an immense brown-stone edifice, to be erected and paid for entirely from the proceeds of quackery. But though his pills continue to go down, his palace failed to go up—for when he got it to the square he found he was not quite square with the world. In other words, he went up himself financially. Stewart, the merchant prince, bought the property, and, determined that no traces of quackery should stand as a reproof to his cloth, razed the building to its foundation, and in its stead has now a palatial pile of purest marble.

On this Avenue stands (or will stand) the new Catholic cathedral, the walls of which are only yet partially erected. It was commenced under the auspices of Archbishop Hughes some twelve or fifteen years ago, and when finished will be the largest and most costly church edifice on this continent. It is now progressing rapidly.

After a brief rest, on our return, we were again in motion for the theatre; but my sheet is at an end, and as I cannot get from New York for another week at any rate, I will close for the present. So au revoir for the time being.

Yours, &c., MACSHANE.

Fenians.—There was a tremendous Fenian raid, or some kind of a raid at the popular store of John J. Murphy, in Johnstown, on Saturday last. I tell you the goods went like hot cakes at a festival. Couldn't count all the customers—don't know numeration well enough. I can enumerate the national debt, but these customers—well, their name was legion. And dry goods fell, and fell, and fell, from shelf to counter, from counter to customer, and all were happy.

Decoration Day.—Almost every day is decoration day at James J. Murphy's Clothing Emporium, No. 109 Clinton street, Johnstown. Mr. Murphy has a large mirror, before which his customers can stand and decorate themselves to their entire satisfaction with his cheap and serviceable made-up clothing—his hats, his caps, his summer clothing, his gent's furnishing goods, and his et ceteras. Hundreds decorate themselves with his nice clothing every week.

The Serenade.—She sang so nice at the serenade, and these were the sweetest words she said: "Go to Mayer's Dry Goods Store, No. 212, Opera House, Main street, Johnstown, and buy all your dress goods and fancy goods, hats and bonnets, shawls and lace, ribbons and flowers, and all that!" Her voice was like that of the siren, and she sang "Go to Mayer's! Go to Mayer's!" and people went to Mayer's and bought such nice, cheap and durable goods.

Scripture.—The apostle says: "When I was a child I thought as a child—I spoke as a child—I understood as a child." So did we, but when we became men we put away childish things—and we now go to Cohen & Bro.'s Hat Parlor and put on man-like adornments. Splendid hats, caps, cuffs, collars, all kind of notions for dress and toilet, at 227 Main street, near Dibert & Co's Banking House. They have the cheapest gent's furnishing goods in town.

Cheapest—Simplest—Best!—Gearing all enclosed and warranted in McLanahan, Stone & Isett's (Hollidaysburg, Pa.) Mower, which they deliver free of freight for $110. They have also the best Independent Spring Tooth Hay Rake, Emory Mower Knife Grinders, Self-Raking Reaper, Gum Spring Drills, Combined Clover Hullers, Separators, Cider Mills, &c., &c. MCLANAHAN, STONE & ISETT, Hollidaysburg, Pa. DIED.

GILLEN.—At her residence in Gallitzin township, on May 27th, ANNIE, wife of Neil Gillen, in the 24th year of her age.

In the noonday of life's sunlight,
Ere gathered the shades of even,
Death came with unpitying blight,
And left our hearts with anguish riven.

He has called from the busy scenes of life,
That earthly friend, truer than whom we have none other—
A beloved, faithful and devoted wife—
A pious, fond and gentle mother.

The tone that taught us to rejoice,
Or soothed us when by passion stirred,
The music of her familiar voice
No more on earth is heard.

And folded on its mother's breast,
Her angel babe—on pinions bright,
One seraph more, now with the blest,
Sings in the realms of light.

Then may that angel clothed in spotless white,
Who with its mother sank to rest,
Herald her soul, made pure and bright,
To the Eternal Port of Rest.

Farewell! wife and mother dear—
Pray that our lives be pure like thine,
While we fondly cherish thy memory here
Our prayers shall be mingled with thine.

WHARTON.—At St. Augustin, Cambria county, Pa., on May 10th, 1870, MARY, wife of Stanislaus Wharton, in the 77th year of her age.

The deceased was a native of Emmitsburg, Md., and came to the Allegheny Mountains in 1807. For several years she was an inmate of the household of the venerable Prince Gallitzin, by whom she was nurtured in those sentiments of Christian piety which marked the course of her useful life. She and her husband were among the early settlers at the Loop, now St. Augustine. Their union was blessed by a numerous offspring, and her mortal remains were followed to the grave by her children's children to the fourth generation. The funeral took place on May 12th, from St. Augustine's church. During her brief mortal illness her patience and resignation were a striking proof that a blameless, pious life is the best preparation for a happy death. May she rest in peace. B. S. A.

ROSADALIS

THE GREAT AMERICAN HEALTH RESTORER purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women, and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and many thousands of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis; send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health Book, or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore, says:

I take pleasure in recommending your ROSADALIS as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in a case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of Scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made and find it an excellent compound of alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of Scrofula and Secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. M'Fadden, Murfreesboro', Tenn., says: I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benj. Bechtol, of Lima, O., writes: I have suffered for 20 years with an inveterate eruption over my whole body. A short time since I bought a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by LEMMON & MURRAY, Ebensburg, and Druggists generally. Laboratory, 61 Exchange Place, Baltimore. CLEMENTS & CO.,

THE FATE OF A FIGHTING DOG.

BY SIM PELTON.

A man he owned a terrier dorg—
A bob-tailed, onery cuss—
And that there purp got that there man
In many an ugly muss;
For the man he was on his muscle,
And the dorg was on his bite,
So to kick that dorg-goned animile
Was sure to raise a fight.

A woman owned a Thomas cat
That fit at fifteen pound,
And other cats got up and slid
When that there cat was round.
The man and his dorg came along one day
Where the woman she did dwell,
And the purp he growled ferociously,
Then went for the purp like—h'm—well.

He tried to chaw the neck of the cat,
But the cat he wouldn't be chawed;
So he lit on the back of that there dorg
And bit and clawed and clawed.
Oh, the hair it flew, and the purp he youled
As the claws went into his hide,
And chunks of flesh were peeled from his back;
When he flummuxed and kicked and died.

The man he ripped and cussed and swore,
As he gathered a big brickbat,
That he would be durned essentially
If he didn't kill that cat.
But the woman allowed she'd be blessed if he did,
And snatched up an old shotgun,
Which she fired, and peppered his diaphragm
With bird-shot number one.

They toted him home on a window blind,
And the doctor cured him up;
But he never was known to fight again,
Or to own another purp.
Folks may turn up their snoots at this rhyme—
I don't care a cuss for that;
All I want to show is that fighting dogs
May tackle the wrong tomcat.

THAT'S THE TALK.

The following is an extract from a speech recently delivered in Indianapolis by Hon. Daniel L. Voorhees on the question of negro suffrage. These outspoken sentiments, coming from so able and fearless a champion of Democracy, will be read with interest by all those who cling to a White Man's Party:

I believe, as I have ever believed, that the admixture of the races is ever fraught with evils and errors to both, and with blessings to none. All history tells this sad, calamitous story, and sustained Gov. Morton when he occupied the same position that I do now. There is not a spot beneath the sun where the experiment has been tried that has not been blighted, with ashes and blood, and always with a deterioration of both races, and acceleration of all the vices of mongrels, and a backward flow of the tide of civilization. Nor will we in the future years escape this revolting doom if we persist in the attempt to absorb in the body politic three millions of a degraded and inferior race.

The wretched results may come slowly here in Indiana, but they will as surely come as the footprints of time continue to advance into the unknown years. There are some, perhaps, who desire the votes of this people. I do not. I would treat them in all kindness, as I ever have, but the white man of my own great race—great in all the world's history, great in peace and great in war, great in science, letters, free governments and Christian progress can better control the destinies of this proud commonwealth without their aid, and into their hands I cast my fate, and with a white man's party I will stand or fall. Already the vagrant negroes, the black lazaroni of Kentucky and other Southern regions, are in transportation to Indiana.

Already it is loudly announced that their voters are to encompass my defeat if I am again a candidate. It will be for the laborers of the State—the white man who tills the soil, the mechanics in the shops—to determine whether they desire this population in their midst. It will be for the oppressed workman of every avocation and calling, who have nothing left save civil rights of citizenship, to decide whether they wish to share them equally with the African. I will appeal to them whether Indiana, a border State, shall be overrun with refuse black elements of the South. I will appeal to them whether they will encourage the presence of those elements in their fields, their workshops, and their firesides. Nor do I fear the result.

The people will be true to the rights of their State, true to the wise and safe traditions of their fathers, true to their own lofty blood and history, true to the purity of their industrial pursuits and social organization, and true to their highest type of civilization which springs from a separation of races.—And if bad and designing men are flooding Indiana with a negro population which of right does not belong here—if this nefarious scheme is at work to carry elections, I warn and implore the agents of this outrage to desist.

How to Treat Corns.—Wearers of tight boots will be interested in the following:

"Hard corns are caused by too much pressure of the shoe, or by its being so loose as to slide back and forth on the spot where the corn afterward shows itself. Medical books record several cases where paring a hard corn has caused a bleeding which no known means could arrest, and death ensued. Nothing harder than the finger nail ought ever to be allowed to touch a corn, which can always be cured, or kept from causing inconvenience, by simply bathing the part in warm water for half an hour for several days in succession; often a single bathing will accomplish the object of so softening the parts adjacent to the actual corn that it can be picked out with the finger nail, and the shoe can be instantly worn without discomfort, which an hour before gave great pain. It may return in a week, or a mouth, or a year, but this same treatment will always avail. Paring them causes them to spread and take deeper root."

A Hermit Woman.—The people near Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., are much exercised about a woman who has in her old age adopted the life of a hermit on the borders of the beautiful Lake of St. John. She has dug an excavation in a bank in a forest, whose foliage overshadows the water at a place where two trees are growing together. These she has boarded up with some rough pieces of plank, which she picked up in the neighborhood, and from these to the bank over the excavation she has placed some saplings as rafters for a roof of dried leaves and straw. In this primitive dwelling she lives and has lived for years, subsisting no one knows how, and drawing water for her scanty meals from an icy spring near by.—Where she came from, who she is, or why she became a hermit, nobody knows.

Perspiration Paragraph.—The disagreeable odor, which is a source of great vexation to those who are subject to it, may be removed much more effectually than by the application of such ungeants and perfumes as are now in use. It is only necessary to procure some compound spirits of ammonia, and place about two tablespoonfuls in a basin of water. Washing the face, hands and arms with this, leaves the skin as clean and fresh as one would wish. The wash is perfectly harmless and very cheap. It is recommended by the authority of an experienced physician, and it ought to be tried at least by all those persons who are so offensive in this respect.
